

Introduction

Perhaps your eyes shall apprehend one day,
Every soiled page, left blank by the arrest of Word.

Perhaps the banner of that song shall rise one day,
Which hangs low, yearning for the arrival of high wind.

Perhaps the beat of that heart shall reach you,
Which lies disgraced, like a stone on the pathway.

Translated by Sain Sucha